Course Registration Hold

Don't forget to submit your final academic records to our office by September 30, 2017. The final, official copy of your academic records needs to have the original stamp or seal of the issuing institution; uncertified or notarized copies are not acceptable. Institutions in the United States and Canada must send records directly to our office.

If you've submitted your records already, you do not need to do anything else unless we email you asking for more information.

Please be aware that you will not be able to register for spring 2018 classes until we process your final academic records. Processing can take up to two weeks after we receive your documents, so we encourage you to submit your records as early as possible.
